

The VW Campmobile. It's a country home, a city bus and a family station wagon.

It's a hunting lodge, beach cottage, cabin by a mountain lake. It's all the comforts of home, including the kitchen sink and a place to plug in the television. With optional pop-up top it sleeps five, even if four are adults. With optional tent, you can sleep even more.

It's the best part of a 40-foot mobile home, only more compactly arranged. Inside you'll find cabinets and closets galore, carpeting and curtains, louvered and screened windows, fold-out beds, swing-away dining table, food storage bin, icebox, sink and work counter. The deluxe model also features a gas stove and an electric refrigerator.

It's still a four-passenger car. Which makes it great for commuting, shopping or going to fancy restaurants where a lot of camping vehicles would be out of place. It also parks in shorter spaces and offers more cargo room and better gas mileage than many conventional station wagons.

And it does these things without having to remove the furnishings. So it gives you creature comforts not found in the most lavish luxury sedans.

The VW Campmobile. The best of all three worlds.

Floor plan of a dream home.

1. Fold-out rear seat. 2. Pad over engine compartment. 3. Ceiling cabinet.
